

67% of the jobs in Washington will require higher education by 2018.

SOURCE: The U.S. National Center for Education Statistics and U.S. Census Bureau / Council of Presidents in Washington.

Unfortunately, Washington ranks 48th out of the 50 states in baccalaureate enrollment in public institutions. While jobs requiring a high school degree have multiple applicants, jobs requiring a college degree do not have enough. This mismatch threatens the future of Washington's economy. Our state universities have experienced chronic disinvestment by the state government for years, even though investment in higher education is essential to our quality of life and the creation of jobs. Join us in support of higher-education funding so we can turn things around — for the greater good.
