

IF PUBLIC EDUCATION WERE FULLY FUNDED IN WASHINGTON ...

“My son would not have 60 kids in his PE class.”

“We wouldn’t have to decide between eliminating wood shop or the International Baccalaureate program at our school.”

“I wouldn’t be paying $5,680 for my twins to go to public kindergarten.”***

K-12 public education is broken in Washington. The Seattle Times’ 2016 Greater Good Campaign is a public service effort to prioritize state funding for education. Reliance on local levies to fund basic education has resulted in drastic inequity across the state in teacher salaries, school supplies, programming, and ultimately, student success. Some districts don’t have a single levy, while others have up to 38 percent in additional funding.

We must level the playing field for Washington’s kids in all 295 districts across the state. Join us in taking action, for the greater good.

seattletimes.com/greatergood

THE GREATER good CAMPAIGN
A BETTER WASHINGTON STARTS WITH BETTER EDUCATION.