

The new way
they teach math makes it easier to do
multiplication
in my head.

I'm learning
how to write
code in the computer lab.

The PTA
pays
for art and music
teachers
at my school.

The bus
picks me up
for school
every day.

My school
day has seven
periods.

14 kids in my class failed
the state
math test.

We don't have enough books
for everyone
in my class.

We don't have art or music at my school.

I walk two
miles to school.
Transportation
is only provided
if you live
farther than that, and I can't afford bus fare.

My school day
has five periods.
We're supposed to have six, but there wasn't enough funding.

A ZIP CODE IS NOT A DESTINY

Reliance on local levies to fund basic education has resulted in inequity across Washington state in teacher salaries, school supplies, programming, and ultimately, student success. Some districts don't have a single levy, while others have up to 38 percent in additional funding.

Level the playing field for all of Washington's kids. Make public education funding and levy reform a priority.
seattletimes.com/greatergood